Rapid urbanisation and the emergence of an aspirational middle class have led to the need to create smart and sustainable living options where it is critical to use available resources efficiently and effectively.

The construction industry in Switzerland has evolved into one of the most ecologically sustainable and environment-friendly social infrastructure environments world over. Innovative technologies in the construction sector have set Switzerland apart. As a consequence, Switzerland has been effectively integrating housing concepts with quality of life.

This Forum will showcase some of these Swiss technologies in an informal interactive format, through information sharing by CEOs of Swiss companies in this sector.
