International Labour Organization

Do you want to change the world? Join the ILO! The International Labour Organization is committed to promote “Decent Work for All” with its mandate to promote social justice, employment and internationally recognized human and labour rights. It is the only tripartite UN agency, bringing together representatives of governments, employers and workers. We work with 187 member States in over 100 countries. If you want to work within an internationally diverse, globally challenging, highly principled environment, then the ILO is the place for you.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) works to foster global growth and economic stability. Created in 1945, the IMF is governed by and accountable to the 189 countries that make up its near-global membership. Supporting economic growth, stability and prosperity in the world economy is challenging work. Our employees are ready to meet the challenges head on with thoughtful analysis, active collaboration and innovative solutions. As part of the IMF, you can contribute to the evolution of the organization and the global economy.

Established in 1951, International Organization for Migration (IOM), the UN Migration Agency works closely with governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental partners. With 169 member states, a further 8 states holding observer status and offices in over 100 countries, IOM is dedicated to promoting humane and orderly migration for the benefit of all. It does so by providing services and advice to governments and migrants. IOM works to help ensure the orderly and humane management of migration, to promote international cooperation on migration issues, to assist in the search for practical solutions to migration problems and to provide humanitarian assistance to migrants in need.

The International Trade Centre (ITC) is the only development agency that is fully dedicated to supporting the internationalization of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). ITC enables SMEs in developing and transition economies to become more competitive and connect to international markets for trade and investment, thus raising incomes and creating job opportunities, especially for women, young people, and poor communities. Established in 1964, the ITC is the joint agency of the World Trade Organization and the United Nations.

The International Telecommunication Union (ITU) is the leading UN agency for information and communication technologies, with the mission to connect the world. ITU manages the radio-frequency spectrum and satellite orbits at the international level, works to improve communication infrastructures in the developing world, and establishes global standards that foster seamless interconnection of a vast range of communication systems. ITU organizes global events bringing together the most influential government and private sector representatives to exchange ideas and knowledge to benefit all.

The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) plays a critical role to ensure that people's life-saving needs are coherently addressed before, during and after humanitarian emergencies, by coordinating disaster preparedness, facilitate sustainable solutions and raise international funds. People affected by crises are at the centre of everything OCHA does and principles of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and operational independence underpin OCHA's advocacy and operations, and this in the world's most severe crises including Syria, Iraq, South Sudan, the Central African Republic and Yemen.

The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) is a unique international institution which sets the standards and defines best practices in almost every field of economic endeavour. We seek to build common understandings and find innovative solutions to tackle the most pressing global challenges and to transform globalisation into a more balanced and harmonious process. This is done by sharing governmental experience, identifying best practices, providing state-of-the-art analysis and reliable comparative statistics in virtually all areas which help governments to improve their public policies. To know more about the OECD, please visit www.oecd.org.

The Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) represents the world's commitment to universal ideals of human dignity. We have a unique mandate from the international community to promote and protect all human rights. We support the work of the United Nations human rights mechanisms, such as the Human Rights Council and the core treaty bodies. We work to ensure the enforcement of universally recognized human rights norms, including through promoting both the universal ratification and implementation of the major human rights treaties and respect for the rule of law.

Depuis 1970 les francophones peuvent s'appuyer sur un dispositif institutionnel voué à promouvoir la langue française et les relations de coopération entre les 80 États et gouvernements membres ou observateurs de l'Organisation internationale de la francophonie (OIF). L'OIF mène des actions politiques et de coopération multilatérale pour donner corps à une solidarité active au bénéfice des populations de ses États et gouvernements membres. Elle agit dans le respect de la diversité culturelle et linguistique et au service de la promotion de la langue française, de la paix et du développement durable.

The Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW), based in The Hague, The Netherlands, is the implementing body of the Chemical Weapons Convention. As of today OPCW has 192 Member States, who are working together to achieve a world free of chemical weapons and share the collective goal of preventing chemistry from ever again being used for warfare. To this end, the Convention contains four key provisions: destroying all existing chemical weapons under international verification by the OPCW; monitoring chemical industry to prevent new weapons from re-emerging; providing assistance and protection to States Parties against chemical threats; and fostering international cooperation to strengthen implementation of the Convention and promote the peaceful use of chemistry.

The Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) is the world's largest regional security organisation. It offers a forum for political negotiations and decision-making in the fields of early warning, conflict prevention, crisis management and post-conflict rehabilitation, and puts the political will of its 57 participating States into practice through its unique network of field missions. The OSCE has a comprehensive approach to security that encompasses politico military, economic and environmental, and human aspects.

Intergovernmental Organisation for International Carriage by Rail (french: Organisation intergouvernementale pour les transports internationaux ferroviaires, OTIF) is an intergovernmental organisation dedicated to international rail transport. It has been active since 1893. It now has 50 Member States. OTIF develops unified railway law to connect Europe, Asia and Africa. It uses simple and effective tools to promote, improve and facilitate international carriage by rail. OTIF provides legal and technical interoperability for international carriage by rail. It works in close partnership with the European Union, the European Union Agency for Railways, the International Rail Transport Committee, the International Union of Railways, the Organization for Co-operation between Railways and the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe.

The South Centre is an intergovernmental organization of developing countries established in 1995 with its headquarters in Geneva. As the multilateral think tank of the South, the Centre provides policy advice and undertakes research and analysis on key issues such as development, international trade, macroeconomic policy, global health, innovation, climate change and sustainable development. We promote South-South Cooperation and more equitable relations between North and South to the sustainable development of all peoples.

UN Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN Women) is the UN organisation dedicated to gender equality and the empowerment of women. A global champion for women and girls, UN Women aims to accelerate progress on meeting their needs worldwide. Grounded in the vision of equality enshrined in the UN Charter, UN Women, among other issues, works for the elimination of discrimination against women and girls, the empowerment of women, and the achievement of equality between women and men as partners and beneficiaries of development, human rights, humanitarian action and peace and security.

The UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) is a permanent intergovernmental body created in 1964, and dedicated to empowering developing countries so that they benefit from fair and sustainable integration in the global economy. In addition to organizing the four-yearly world summits that set the tone for global trade and development, UNCTAD produces cutting-edge research to help policymakers make smart and strategic choices on a host of issues, from investment, transport and the digital economy, to illicit financial flows, tourism, commodities and green goods.

The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) was founded in 1966. As the UN's global development network, the organization advocates for change and connect countries to knowledge, experience and resources to help build nations that can withstand crisis, and drive and sustain the kind of growth that improves the quality of life for everyone. UNDP's mission is to support countries' efforts to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, which will guide global development priorities through 2030. It works in nearly 170 countries and territories, to help eradicate poverty in all its forms and dimensions and build resilience to crises and shocks. In all its activities, UNDP encourages the protection of human rights and the empowerment of women, minorities and the poorest and most vulnerable.

The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) is the leading global environmental authority that sets the global environmental agenda, promotes the coherent implementation of the environmental dimension of sustainable development within the UN system, and serves as an authoritative advocate for the global environment. Our mission is to provide leadership and encourage partnership in caring for the environment by inspiring, informing, and enabling nations and peoples to improve their quality of life without compromising that of future generations. Headquartered in Nairobi, Kenya, we work through our divisions as well as our regional, liaison and out-posted offices and a growing network of collaborating centres of excellence. We also host several environmental conventions, secretariats and inter-agency coordinating bodies

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) was founded in 1945. UNESCO's mission is to contribute to the building of a culture of peace, the eradication of poverty, sustainable development and intercultural dialogue through education, the sciences, culture, communication and information with its 195 Member States and ten Associate Members. UNESCO Headquarter is located in Paris, France. The Organisation has some 54 Field Offices worldwide and also includes 11 specialized centres and Institutes disseminated around the world.

The office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) was created in 1950, during the aftermath of the Second World War, to help millions of Europeans who had fled or lost their homes. Today, over 67 years later, our organization is still hard at work, to ensure on a non-political and humanitarian basis the protection of millions of refugees, asylum seekers, internally displaced people and stateless people, worldwide. UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, is faced with an unprecedented number – over 65 million people – displaced due to ongoing conflicts and new emergencies. It is UNHCR's job to face these challenges, to lead and coordinate international action for the protection of refugees and the resolution of refugee problems. Today, UNHCR has over 10,966 staff working in 130 countries.

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) is the specialized agency of the United Nations that promotes inclusive and sustainable industrial development for poverty reduction, inclusive globalization and environmental sustainability. The relevance of ISID as an integrated approach to all three pillars of sustainable development is recognized by the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the related Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), which frame international development efforts. UNIDO's mandate is fully recognized in SDG9, which calls to "Build resilient infrastructure, promote inclusive and sustainable industrialization and foster innovation".

United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) develops the individual, institutional and organizational capacities of countries through high-quality learning solutions and related services to enhance decision making and to support country-level action for overcoming global challenges. UNITAR's work is aligned with the 2030 Agenda, as well as with the outcomes of the other major 2015 international conferences. UNITAR's outreach is considerable with the delivery of close to 500 training-related events per year to some 40,000 individuals around the world.

Housed at the Palais des Nations, the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG) serves as the representative office of the Secretary-General at Geneva. A focal point for multilateral diplomacy, UNOG services more than 8,000 meetings every year, making it one of the busiest conference centres in the world. With more than 1,600 staff, it is the biggest duty stations outside of United Nations headquarters in New York. UNOG manages the United Nations facilities in Geneva and provides conference services for the United Nations meetings held at Geneva.

We work to make social equity, inclusion and justice central to development thinking, policy and practice. The United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) is an autonomous institute in the UN system dedicated to multidisciplinary research and policy analysis on social dimensions of current development issues in Social Policy, Gender and Sustainable Development. Our small Geneva-based staff engages in research, communications and policy engagement activities in partnership with a global network of people and institutions to co-create knowledge, and shape policy and practice. unrisd.org

The International Union for the Protection of New Varieties of Plants (UPOV) is an intergovernmental organization based in Geneva. The mission of UPOV is to provide and promote an effective system of plant variety protection, with the aim of encouraging the development of new varieties of plants, for the benefit of society. UPOV has 75 members covering the territories of 94 States. Plant breeding is a major contributor to increased food security within the context of climate change. The UPOV system plays a crucial role in encouraging plant breeders to meet that objective (see <http://www.upov.int>).

The Universal Postal Union (UPU) is the United Nations specialized agency for postal services. Established in 1874 the UPU, located in Bern, is the second oldest international organisation worldwide and has around 260 staff members. It is the primary forum for cooperation between governments, regulators, Posts and other stakeholders of the global postal sector. The UPU sets the rules for international mail exchanges among its 192 member countries, develops technical standards and encourages the adoption of regulations among all postal sector players. The UPU also works to stimulate trade facilitation, social, financial and economic inclusion through the postal network. Member countries rely on the UPU for technical assistance to help them strengthen their postal network, processes and offerings.

The World Customs Organization (WCO) is an independent intergovernmental organisation whose primary mission is to enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of Customs Administrations worldwide. As the only intergovernmental organisation specialized in Customs matters, the WCO currently represents 182 Members (governments) across the globe at all stages of social and economic development. Being the global centre of Customs expertise and the voice of the international Customs community, the WCO provides an ideal forum for Customs administrations and their stakeholders to hold in-depth discussions, exchange experiences, and share best practices on a range of international Customs and trade issues.

The World Food Programme (WFP) is the leading humanitarian organization fighting hunger worldwide and working towards the global goal of ending hunger by 2030. WFP is delivering food assistance in emergencies and working with communities to improve nutrition and build resilience. Two-thirds of its work is in conflict-affected countries where people are three times more likely to be undernourished than those living in countries without conflict. An average of 80 million people receive food assistance in around 80 countries each year by WFP while almost 15,000 people are dedicatedly working for the organisation.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) is the directing and coordinating authority for health within the United Nations system. It is responsible for providing leadership on global health matters, shaping the health research agenda, setting norms and standards, articulating evidence-based policy options, providing technical support to countries and monitoring and assessing health trends. More than 7000 people from more than 150 countries work for the Organisation in 150 WHO offices all over the world.

The World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) is the global forum for intellectual property policy, services, information and cooperation. A specialized agency of the United Nations, WIPO assists its 191 member states in developing a balanced international IP legal framework to meet society's evolving needs. It provides business services for obtaining IP rights in multiple countries and resolving disputes. It delivers capacity-building programs to help developing countries benefit from using IP. And it provides free access to unique knowledge banks of IP information.

The World Trade Organization (WTO) deals with the global rules of trade between nations. Its main function is to ensure that trade flows as smoothly, predictably and freely as possible. Beginning life on 1 January 1995, the WTO succeeded the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade which had regulated world trade since 1948. Over the past 20 years, the WTO has made a major contribution to the strength and stability of the global economy, helping to boost trade growth, resolve numerous trade disputes and support the integration of developing countries into the trading system. Currently with 164 members, of which more than one-fifth are represented by least-developed countries, WTO activities are supported by a Secretariat of some 700 staff, led by the WTO Director-General. The Secretariat is located in Geneva, Switzerland, and the three official languages are English, French and Spanish.
