The data above reveals that the radiation absorbed dose rate is within the local safe rate range in each city and the Japanese nuclear crisis does not affect environment or public health in China.