Foreword

Dear reader,

I am very happy to present you the latest edition of the handbook on Swiss-Indian Trade and Investment Relations, which once again gives you a concise, but at the same time comprehensive overview of the bilateral economic ties between Switzerland and India. The directory at hand is meant to serve as a guide to both Swiss and Indian business actors with interest in the Indo-Swiss economic ties. Swiss exports to India have not done overwhelmingly well since the last publication of this brochure in 2013. The number of Swiss companies active in India, however, has further increased in the last three years with now about 250 joint ventures, subsidiaries, branches and liaison offices being present here and directly employing more than 100'000 people.

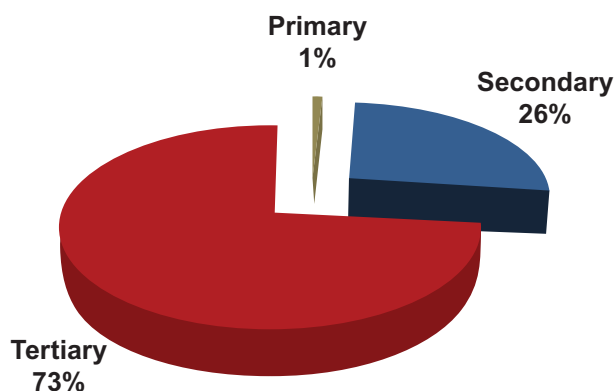

This ever growing presence of Swiss companies in India is not only a sign of the continuous strong interest in this market, it also explains to a certain extent the somewhat lacklustre development of Swiss exports to the subcontinent, as more and more manufacturers have decided to increasingly produce in India. At the same time, more Indian companies are discovering Switzerland as a favourable investment location that fits perfectly well into their international expansion plans. So far more than 100 Indian companies have made investments and taken advantage of Switzerland as an ideal gateway for the European market. It is therefore with great satisfaction that I note that despite the persisting global economic challenges our economic relations could steadily be strengthened through rising investment flows in both directions.

Many more opportunities lie ahead for Swiss and Indian companies to successfully do business. And the official Swiss network in India, comprising of the Embassy, the Consulates General in Mumbai and Bangalore, the Swiss Business Hub and Swissnex (which promotes cooperation in science, research and higher education) as well as our Honorary Consuls in Kolkata and Chennai, continues to be committed to further broaden and enhance the excellent bilateral economic relations and to help paving the way for fruitful Swiss-Indian business collaborations. I hope that reading this business directory will prove useful to you and contribute to your business success.

³ Switzerland's share in Indian import is very high due to the fact that it is the largest supplier of precious metals to the Indian market. Its share comes down to 0.43% if the values of gold and silver are deducted from the overall import from Switzerland.

Swiss-Indian economic and trade relationship – an overview

Switzerland and India have long nurtured a close and substantive relationship, based on bilateral cooperation in diverse fields. The economic and commercial ties between the two countries date back to the pre-independence days of India. It was as early as 1851 that a Swiss trading operation was established in India by the Volkart Brothers. This relationship was further reinforced when India and Switzerland signed the Treaty of Friendship on 14th August 1948, the first such treaty to be signed by independent India. Since then, bilateral relations have been constantly diversified and strengthened encompassing trade, investment, science and technology, research and development fields, to name a few.

There are various bilateral agreements between Switzerland and India such as the Avoidance of Double Taxation, the Promotion and Protection of Investments, Cooperation in Science and Technology, and Social Security etc., that provide a sound framework for promoting mutually beneficial business activities. Currently, Switzerland, together with the other European Free Trade Association (EFTA) countries Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway, is negotiating a trade and economic partnership agreement with India. Such a free trade agreement is designed to improve mutual market access and eliminate trade barriers. Switzerland and India also institutionalised different fora such as the Joint Economic Commission and the Financial Dialogue with the aim to further strengthen their trade and economic ties.

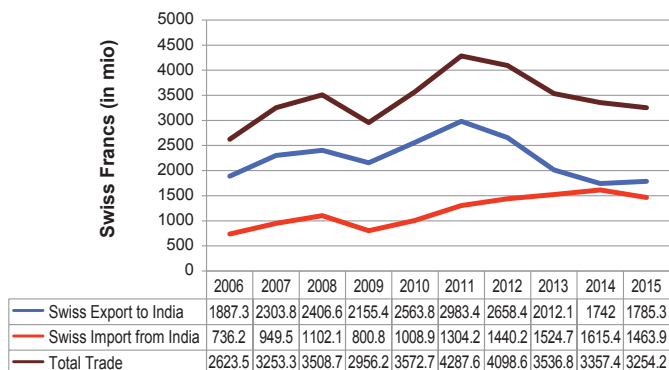

The world economy has been experiencing a lower growth trajectory in the recent past and growth prospects both in advanced and emerging economies have weakened mainly because of macro imbalances and financial excesses. However, India has emerged as a relatively bright spot in the current fragile global economy scenario, as it has a big internal economy that gives it some resilience. India is benefitting also from the falling global commodity and oil prices, and has been able to put under control the inflation and interest rates. Though the country is still subject to global economic forces (as seen in its declining exports), it is less exposed than other similar economies. Moreover, the present Indian government has made significant changes to some barriers to trade and investment during the past two years. These include further liberalisation of foreign direct investment, ease of customs procedures and improving transparency and accountability of bureaucracy to a certain extent.

India's GDP is expected to grow by over 7 per cent in 2016, driven by rising consumer spending and higher capital spending by the government in the infrastructure sector. The country continues to present promising growth opportunities which make the Indian market an attractive business location for both existing companies as well as new entrants. It remains an important investment destination and trading partner for the Swiss economy. Swiss companies have been actively providing cutting edge technologies and high-tech products to various industrial sectors. In the services sector, too, Switzerland's expertise and knowledge in financial services and engineering services have contributed to create many mutually beneficial business ventures.

Trade between the two countries has grown well in the last ten years. The bilateral trade flows reached a new record, amounting to CHF 4.28 billion in 2011. Thereafter, the difficult global economic conditions as well as strong Swiss Franc had an impact on the trade exchanges. The Swiss exports to India had a decline during 2012-2014, but started once again to rise in 2015, whereas imports from India went up constantly during 2009-2014 and only marginally declined in 2015. Overall, the prospects for acceleration in bilateral trade exchanges look promising.

The following graph depicts the evolution of the Swiss-Indian trade between 2006 and 2015.

Switzerland and India also have a strong relationship in terms of trade in services. For example, both sides enjoy a good exchange of touristic traffic. Tourist arrivals from India have been growing steadily for many years. The country remains an important market for Swiss tourism, with 591,924 overnights spent by Indians in Switzerland during 2015 (22% y-o-y growth). For information technology related services, Switzerland is a major market for Indian companies. The export of software and other IT-enabled services from India to Switzerland is estimated to be over USD 2 billion annually.

With regard to direct investments, Switzerland has been actively involved in India for many decades and remains amongst the top foreign investors in India. As per the cumulative foreign direct investment inflows data available for April 2000-December 2015, Switzerland is the 11th largest foreign investor, investing some USD 3.2 billion (see below table). However, the actual figure is much higher as a large part of foreign direct investments to India, including investment from Switzerland, is routed through other countries. As per the latest Swiss National Bank data, Swiss companies made investments worth CHF 7.57 billion in India during the period 2005-2014.

As India continues to offer growth opportunities for Swiss companies, an increasing number of Swiss companies are triggering investments across sectors. At present, there are some 250 Swiss companies having joint ventures or subsidiaries in India and the number continues to go up.

Swiss companies present in India have successfully taken advantage of business opportunities to grow within an overall promising and reforming Indian market environment. Numerous Swiss companies have established new manufacturing plants in order to mitigate the consequences of the strong Swiss franc and high import duty in the value conscious Indian market. However, obstacles to doing business in India such as excessive bureaucracy, red tape, complex tax system, slow judicial system, insufficient IPR enforcement, rigid labour laws and inadequate infrastructure remain of concern. The political situation is stable, and the present government has been taking initiatives to improve the environment for doing business in India. Consequently, India has been able to improve its position in many global ratings over the past year.

On the other hand, Corporate India is increasingly striving to become economically more active in international markets, and consequently India's outbound investments have been growing during the recent years. As per data from the Reserve Bank of India, outward direct investments (equity, loan and guarantee issued) worth USD 38 billion were approved during the period 2012 to 2015.

Switzerland regularly ranks among the top five European investment destinations⁵. Many Indian companies have realised the importance of Switzerland as a gateway to Europe, due to competitive advantages it offers to foreign investors. Key factors that make Switzerland attractive for Indian investors are its geo-strategic location in the centre of Europe, political and economic stability, modern infrastructure, the strong financial centre, the liberal labour market, strong industry and technology clusters and a moderate tax structure. The Global Competitiveness Index Report 2015-16 has ranked Switzerland as the world's most competitive economy for the seventh consecutive year, confirming once again the attractiveness of the Swiss business and investment climate. As per data from the Reserve Bank of India, outward direct investments (equity, loan and guarantee issued) from India to Switzerland worth CHF 2.39 billion were approved during the years 2014 and 2015. Currently, more than 100 Indian companies have their presence in Switzerland. Several large Indian companies, e.g. Tata (with several subsidiaries), Mahindra & Mahindra, Dr. Reddy, Infosys, Wipro, HCL, Wockhardt and Glenmark, have made investment in sectors such as life sciences and ICT.

Recent reform initiatives by India have created enhanced potential for Swiss-Indian business collaboration. Sectors such as clean technology, life sciences, engineering, medtech, financial services, construction materials and equipment, consumer goods, railways and defence offer plenty of opportunities for Swiss companies. With Switzerland and India having attached high importance to their efforts for further transforming bilateral economic and trade connections, the future looks promising for the two business communities.

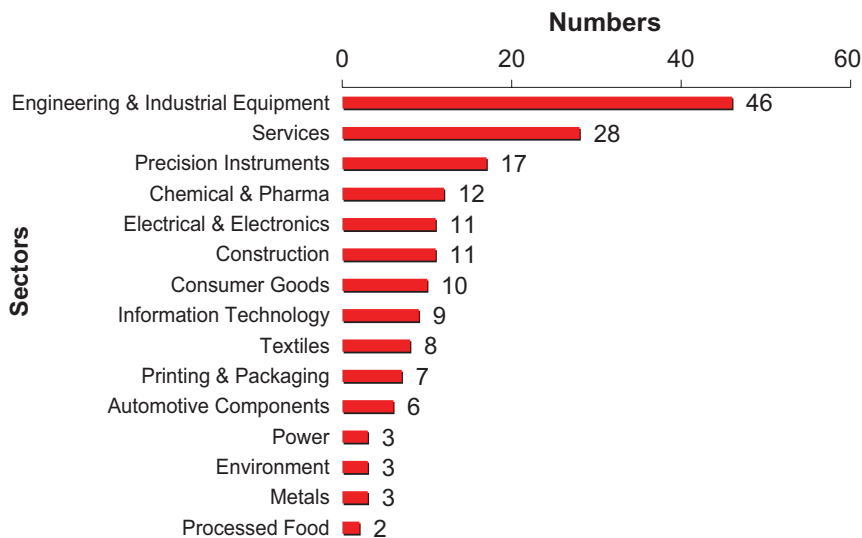

⁵ RBI OFDI figures do not take into account that a majority of investments are routed via other jurisdictions for tax structuring purposes.

Analysis of Swiss investments in India

Switzerland has been among the top investing countries in India for the past many years. The buoyant growth of the Indian economy as well as its ongoing liberalisation process has attracted many Swiss companies to establish operations or explore collaborative opportunities in India. Information from various sources in India and Switzerland, both government and private, indicate that presently about 250 Swiss companies operate in India through joint ventures, subsidiaries and branch/liaison offices across various sectors. This is a fair increase compared to some 170 Swiss companies that were operating in India in 2010.

The Embassy conducted a brief analysis of these businesses in the first quarter of 2016. Some 215 companies were approached, and the Embassy received replies from 176 companies (response rate 82%) and these have been listed in this handbook. It is noteworthy to mention that most of the existing businesses have successfully expanded their operations in India in spite of the subdued global economic conditions and only a few companies have ceased their operations since the previous survey held in 2013.

Sector-wise distribution of Swiss-Indian collaborations

Note: Services include consultancy, finance, tourism, logistics; Instruments include medical devices; Chemical and Pharma include biotech; Construction includes cement, infrastructure; Consumer Goods include watches; Information Technology includes software and BPO; Textiles include machinery, intermediates and final products.

The sector-wise distribution of Swiss investments in India shows that a majority of these companies are engaged in the traditional Swiss sectors of excellence - engineering and industrial equipment, services, precision instruments, chemical and pharmaceutical as well as electrical & electronics.

In other sectors like power and food processing only a few Swiss players are currently present. But important investors such as ABB and Nestle have a strong position in the Indian market. A growing interest from Swiss companies in sectors such as IT, printing & packaging as well as construction has increasingly translated into new investments.

The geographical distribution of Swiss companies in India shows that the Western region (mainly Mumbai and Pune) has attracted the highest number of investments, followed by the National Capital Region - NCR (Delhi, Gurgaon, Noida) and the Southern region (Bangalore and Chennai). Notably, over the previous three years, more Swiss companies have opted for Karnataka and Tamil Nadu as their preferred investment destination.

New entrants from Switzerland have certainly strengthened the Swiss economic engagement in India. With expansions carried out by many existing Swiss companies in India in the recent years, these companies together directly employ more than 100'000 personnel. As India is currently one of the fastest growing economies in the world, there is significant scope not only for new investment from Switzerland but also for add-on investment from Swiss companies already having business enterprises in India.
