ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE

The Visa Waiver Program (VWP) allows citizens of participating countries to travel to the United States without a visa for stays of 90 days or less. As of April 1, 2016 all travelers from Switzerland and other qualifying countries must hold an electronic passport to be eligible to enter the United States visa-free. This rule applies even to those who possess a valid Electronic System for Travel Authorization (ESTA).

Visa Waiver Program Conditions
You may travel visa free if you meet all of the following requirements:

- You are a citizen of a Visa Waiver Program country;
- You have completed an on-line ESTA registration and received approval for visa waiver travel;
- You have a passport that is valid for at least 6 months after your planned departure from the United States (unless exempted by country-specific agreements). Swiss passports are automatically extended for six months from the date of expiration.
- You are traveling for business, pleasure or transit only;
- Your intended stay in the US does not exceed 90 days.
- You will enter the US aboard an air or sea carrier that has agreed to participate in the program. This applies to most airlines and shipping companies. You will need a visa if you travel on a private plane, official aircraft, yacht or other vessel.
- Additional conditions for eligibility in the Visa Waiver Program may apply, depending on your planned method of transit to the United States.

If you are a citizen of a Visa Waiver Program country, but have received notice that you are no longer eligible to travel to the United States under that program, you should apply for a nonimmigrant visa at least three months in advance of your desired travel date. If you do not have imminent travel plans, you should pay the nonimmigrant visa application fee, fill out the DS-160 nonimmigrant visa application form at www.ceac.state.gov/genniv, and schedule a visa appointment. If your travel is imminent, you may request an expedited visa appointment. Please include in your request the date and purpose of your travel, as well as a copy of the U.S. Customs and Border Protection message you received regarding your ESTA status.
See further application instructions on the website of our application processing partner: http://www.ustraveldocs.com/ch/.

Transfer from the airport to the city center:

Major U.S. airports have a number of different ground transportation options upon arrival, i.e. taxi, uber, lyft and limousine services as well as local city and certain major hotel shuttle services. In addition, some cities also have local subway/train transport directly from the respective airports.

HEALTH REQUIREMENTS

Mandatory and recommended vaccinations:

Some vaccines are recommended or required for United States. The CDC and WHO recommend the following vaccinations for United States: hepatitis A, hepatitis B, rabies, meningitis, polio, measles, mumps and rubella (MMR), Tdap (tetanus, diphtheria and pertussis), chickenpox, shingles, pneumonia and influenza.

COVID-19 vaccination is recommended for travel to all regions, both foreign and domestic. For information regarding current COVID-19 related restrictions on travel to the United States, look here: https://ch.usembassy.gov/visas/nonimmigrant-visas/covid-19-travel-to-the-united-states/

Mandatory medical insurance:

Before you leave your home country invest in Travel/Emergency Medical Insurance. Talk to your travel agent or go online and search for a company that can underwrite a policy for you. It is inexpensive piece of mind coverage compared to what you may be charged in the case of a full blown (or simple) incident.

You might want to visit USTIA (United States Travel Insurance Association) website at http://www.ustia.org/ to see the list of authorized insurance providers. If you would like to compare various insurance plans and select the best fit for your visit, you could check out sites like https://www.multchoiceinsurance.com | http://www.visitorguard.com | www.visitorshield.com | www.visitorscoverage.com | www.path2usa.com/insurance/ | www.insubuy.com that help you compare, get quotes and buy travel insurance online hassle-free.

You may encounter insects, spiders, or snakes in the area that you are unfamiliar with: rattlesnakes, Gila monsters, black widows, scorpions, coral snakes, african bees, fire ants, copperheads, and water moccasins are all native to the United States and all are venomous. If you are bitten or stung, please call the poison center at 1-800-222-1222. Try to remain calm if you are bitten and try to minimize movement if you can: many of the above have hemotoxins in their venom (the more you move the more it circulates through the body) do not hesitate if you think you have been bitten: time counts.

In the event of a non-emergency illness, hotel concierges can arrange for consultations. Inquire about prices, as the fee-for-service nature of American medicine may be unfamiliar to visitors from overseas with government-sponsored health programs. Most travel insurance plans will also provide a multi-lingual emergency assistance service that can be contacted 24/7, it is advisable to always keep this information handy.
PUBLIC SECURITY / RECOMMENDED PRECAUTIONS

Police officers patrolling in cars, on foot and on horseback are a very common sight in American cities and have highly trained professionals. They deal with everything from typical traffic stops and domestic disturbances to more dangerous situations, like robberies, violent crimes and weather related disasters. Generally speaking a visitor will see these men and women both on and off duty, and one of their key jobs is keeping the peace during festivals, major events or for parades; they also patrol the beat during the week and on weekends near bars and other entertainment spots to make sure order is kept. Unlike many countries, American police officers wear their guns, and are trained to use them. However, they do not typically use them unless they absolutely have to do it, like in cases of armed robbery, assault, rape, or other violent crimes. That being said, one should always treat a policeman with respect, and call him or her “officer”. Policemen can be quite helpful in sorting out where to go if you are lost and can be a great asset if you are in need of any law enforcement intervention. Never attempt to touch a police officer’s gun and do not ever attempt to bribe him, since the first is a very dangerous move and the second is a serious crime - you will be arrested for this and brought in front of a judge, with a very heavy penalty.

Theft and pick-pocketing are common in urban areas in the United States. Never leave your valuables alone or out of sight in heavily populated areas. Credit card fraud can also be common, especially during holiday periods. Make sure your card is always in sight and make sure to check into your bank account regularly. Violent crime can occur in disadvantaged areas due to gang violence. The chance of a tourist being involved in violent crimes such as this is low.

As concerns smoking, it is illegal for anyone under the age of 18 to smoke. Buying cigarettes for a minor can range anywhere from a $500.00 fine to jail time. Smoking restrictions vary greatly from place to place, from having no restrictions at all to complete city-wide bans. Smoking is prohibited on airplanes and in any public restaurant entirely; it is seen as a fire risk (this includes smoking in the toilet of a plane: you may force the plane to land if you are caught; Once on the ground, laws may be enacted by individual states, counties, and cities. Some laws even limit outdoor smoking by prohibiting smoking within a certain distance from a building's entrance. Observe to see if others around you are smoking, or ask if anyone minds before doing so. Fines for smoking in a prohibited place range in amount from $50 on up to $1,000, plus offenders may be thrown out of an establishment for violating house rules, sometimes barred forever. Americans rarely walk around when smoking. They find a place that allows smoking (away from restricted areas) and usually stay in one place until done with their cigarette.

TIME ZONE

In the U.S., time is read on a 12-hour clock with a.m. (before noon) and p.m. (after noon). If you are told 8 o'clock, it could mean 08:00 or 20:00. Make sure to ask if you specify a.m. or p.m.

The United States and its territories operate under the following nine time zones (only four of which apply to the continental U.S.):

Atlantic Time (AST) - Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands
Eastern Standard Time (EST)
Central Standard Time (CST)
Mountain Standard Time (MST)
Pacific Standard Time (PST)
Alaska Standard Time (AKST)
Hawaii-Aleutian Time (HAST)
Samoa Standard Time (SST) - American Samoa, Midway Islands
Chamorro Standard Time (ChST) - Guam, Northern Mariana Islands
Daylight Saving Time

The United States utilizes daylight saving time. The adage “spring forward, fall back” applies to daylight saving time. Clocks are set ahead one hour on the second Sunday in March and turned back one hour on the first Sunday of November. Arizona, Hawaii and the territories of American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands do not follow daylight saving time.

Time difference between Switzerland and the United States varies depending on which of the four continental time zones you are in.

- Washington D.C./New York City: -6 hours (EST)
- Chicago: -7 hours (CST)
- Denver: -8 hours (MST)
- Los Angeles / San Francisco: -9 hours (PST)

BUSINESS HOURS

Business hours vary greatly across the U.S. Big cities tend to have longer or even 24-hour business openings, while small towns have more limited service hours and increased closures during off-peak times. It is always helpful to check operating hours in advance. Here are some general business hours in the United States:

Banks:
Monday-Thursday: 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Friday: 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Saturday: 9 a.m.-12 p.m.

Call 911 for all emergencies, police, fire, and medical. There are still some rural areas where the 911 number is not functional and one needs to call specific numbers for help. All urban and essentially all suburban regions follow the universal 911 code availability. If you dial 911 on a wireless phone, make sure to tell the operator where exactly you are located as GPS phone location technology is not offered on all phone companies and 911 call centers. Also some 911 call centers for cell phone calls are directed to a state (not local) operated call center, thus the importance to tell the operator exactly where you are, who you are, and what is the situation.

Cell Phone and Internet Connectivity:

While it is called "mobile phone" in British English, it is "cell phone" in American English.

There are three major cell phone operators in the United States that offer nationwide wireless services - Verizon, AT&T and T-Mobile; All three operate networks using the LTE standard for their 4G and also offer 5G services.

Over 90% of Americans have access to the internet and ¾ of them have broadband internet service in their homes. All U.S. states provide a great deal when it comes to providing free public wifi in public places and restaurants.
ELECTRICITY SUPPLY

The standard in the United States is 120V and 60Hz AC electricity.
Residential voltage in the USA is 120 / 240 volts AC. Power enters the dwelling’s main electrical panel from a power company transformer as two 120 volt lines with phases that are 180 degrees apart. 120 and 240 volts (along with neutral and ground) is then distributed to outlet boxes (switch, receptacle, light fixture, etc) throughout the dwelling.
Residential electric ranges, electric dryers and central air conditioners usually need 240 volts to operate. 240 volts is achieved when combining two sources of 120 volts of different phases (A and B phases).

METHODS OF PAYMENT

National currency in the United States is the U.S. dollar which is divided into 100 cents. The dollar is denoted internally by the symbol $ and externally by the symbol US$ or USD. The U.S. dollar is fully convertible.

Exchange rate as of February 9, 2022: CHF 1 = USD 1.08

The United States generally does not impose exchange controls or restrictions on the flow of currency in or out of the country. However, a Report of International Transportation of Currency and Monetary Instruments (FinCEN 105) must be filed with a customs officer at the port of entry or with the Commissioner of Customs in Washington D.C., if amounts exceeding $10,000 in currency or other monetary instruments are transported to or from the United States on any one occasion. In addition, financial and commercial transactions with certain countries require Department of the Treasury licensing.
Tipping: While tipping is not mandatory in most of the United States, it is customary in many circumstances for service, especially at almost all sit-down restaurants which offer table service and many food servers depend on tips as an essential part of their wage. Generally, the average tip is 15% to 20% of the total meal cost.

Keep in mind that those who provide service are often dependent on tip income and generally are grateful for any tips received, especially when prompt and exceptional service has been provided. Tipping is the means by which to acknowledge good service. Besides servers, tips are also given to bartenders, baristas, food delivery service people, movers, hotel valet staff, concierge and housekeeping, hair and nail technicians and parking attendents. https://www.coworkingresources.org/blog/largest-coworking-companies

Temporary office space otherwise known as coworking companies are enticing for potential members in many ways. They have multiple locations in most major cities, which means wherever you are, there will most likely be one close to your home or even your Airbnb when you're traveling. Plus they often have flexible membership options that grant access to multiple locations, especially for members of larger coworking companies. This is a huge benefit to users that travel frequently — whether it's for work, to meet clients, or simply for pleasure.

The biggest coworking companies include:

- Impact Hub
- WeWork
- Your Alley
- Knotel
- District Cowork
- Make Office
- Industrious Office
- Techspace
- Venture X
- Serendipity Labs
- Green Desk
- SomeCentral

LANGUAGES USED FOR BUSINESS

American English is the official language with Spanish also being spoken in certain regions and cities like Miami, Florida and areas closer to the Mexican border or where there are larger concentrations of Hispanic people living.

BUSINESS PRACTICES

American business culture is efficiency-oriented and money-driven. “Time is money” means that no one has time to waste with business opportunities that would not be thoroughly prepared and/or could not demonstrate their return on investment. The culture of the country is also based on the belief that it is hard work that drives success, not status or age.

Depending on the industry, region or company history, the hierarchy can be vertical or flat. Thus, the respect of hierarchical differences may vary and it is advised to learn the rank and titles of all the members you engage with inside an organisation. Decision-making is often a well-defined process inside the organisation. Final decisions are usually made quickly by a person with chief authority, but anyone is welcome to express their opinion in meetings or during the decision-making process, no matter their age or position in the hierarchy.

In general, it is not necessary to develop a personal relationship to establish a lasting and successful business relationship. Americans are generally more interested in your product, service or project, expected payoffs as well as quality of the business collaboration, rather than trying to create a personal relationship.

Tips for initiating business contacts:

Americans are used to communicating by email and then engage with other forms of more direct communication, such as Skype or conference calls. Emails are expected to be short and straight to the point in order to be quick to read, direct, clear and efficient.

Scheduling Meetings:

Punctuality and time management is a fundamental value in US business culture, both in terms of time to start the meeting/call and time to terminate it. Tardiness may reflect disrespect and rudeness. In situations where you know you will be late, even by a few minutes, you should tell your American partner about your delay and offer to postpone the meeting.

Meeting agendas are common, timed in advance, and usually followed quite carefully. Organize yourself to address all the topics of a meeting within the timeframe assigned to it, or you take the risk that your agenda will only be partially covered, as your counterparts will move to their next commitments when the time planned for the meeting finishes. During discussions, it is common to have small talk on a light subject before talking business to create a comfortable environment: weather, travel conditions, sports, a joke, etc. After this short introduction, most Americans start the meeting by getting directly to the point, even when expressing disagreement, and can very well start negotiations by clearly stating their position from the beginning.

During presentations, it is advised to use statistics, evidence and hard data to back up your claims. It is essential to be direct, clear, transparent and open about all matters. Do not be overwhelmed if your American partners impose harsh negotiation terms in order to obtain greater negotiation margins.

Interaction, participation and concentration are important to prove your preparation and interest. Americans are rather uncomfortable with silence, which is usually avoided in business meetings. The use of humor is appreciated and well received, since it facilitates openness in business relations. It is not polite to interrupt someone talking. When the meeting is not scheduled around a meal, snacks are common.

Business meetings that include lunch or dinner are not very common. However if a meeting is conducted in such a context, the business conversation usually begins almost immediately or as soon as everyone has ordered their food.

Business cards:

There is no specific protocol for the exchange of business cards. It can be done either during introductions, at the beginning of the meeting or when leaving. Most business people now show their position and details in the signature of their email messages template, so business cards tend to be less and less needed. Another medium of communication is increasingly used: LinkedIn. It is replacing business cards as the go-to way to meet contacts and pass on details.

Business attire:

Appropriate dress usually depends on region, industry, position, company culture, client facing vs. back-office etc. Senior managers and clients facing workers tend to dress formally at all times (e.g. banking, consulting, sales, lawyers, etc.). In general IT companies do not impose a formal dress code.
Introducing yourself:
You should give a firm handshake, with direct eye contact and a smile, but respect 2 or 3 feet distance from your partner; do not hug or kiss.

When meeting someone for the first time, it is advised to address your business partners with a title, such as “Dr”, “Ms”, “Ms” or “Mrs” and their last name. The use of first names is common to address counterparts in business meetings, but it is recommended to wait for your American counterparts to do it first or to invite you to do so.

Offering and accepting gifts and invitations:
Because of anti-bribery policies, it is advised not to offer gifts to your U.S. partners. Cash gifts are clearly inappropriate and, in some US companies, it is stated in the contracts or in the internal policies that employees should not be offered any form of gifts. Even paying for your U.S. counterpart’s lunch could be considered inappropriate.

Sensitive topics:
Controversial topics may include politics, religion, homosexuality, racism, abortion, criticism of the government, and criticism of an individual's patriotism. As in any country, locals generally do not take too kindly to constant criticisms of their government by foreigners. Make sure you know the political leanings and temperaments of those around you before broaching such topics.

Discussions of wealth or money. Americans generally do not discuss how much money they make or how much they paid for certain high-end items (such as houses, cars, boats, TV systems, etc.) cost. It is considered very rude to ask and is even more uncomfortable to discuss.

BUSINESS RISKS

Some of the more common types of risk which companies have to look out for in the U.S. are economic, compliance, security and fraud, financial, reputation, operational and competition. For small businesses, the most common types of fraud are workman’s compensation, check tampering, revenue skimming, fraudulent invoicing, payroll fraud and vendor billing fraud.

IMPORT OF SAMPLES AND CATALOGS

The ATA Carnet is an international customs document which allows an individual traveler / business to temporarily export or import goods (samples or catalogs i.e. for trade show participation) for commercial purposes to and from a country without having to pay duty or value-added taxes on the goods. ATA Carnets serve as a guarantee for signatory countries against the payment of customs duties that may become due on goods that are not re-exported as required. “ATA” stands for the combined French and English words “Admission Temporaire – Temporary Admission.” There are 87 countries and territories that accept carnets. See a complete list of Carnet countries https://www.atacarnet.com/carnet-countries.

Most merchandise can be listed on a Carnet. Virtually all types of goods and equipment can be transported under the ATA Carnet:

- Commercial Samples
- Professional Equipment (Tools of the Trade)
- Goods for Fairs & Exhibitions (limited to 6 months)

See the complete list of Merchandise categories covered by Carnet here.
